nancy eraca disbarred

I cannot find any reliable indication that an attorney named Nancy Eraca has been disbarred. The limited references I can access show:

- A Colorado criminal defense blog where “Nancy Eraca” appears only as the name of a commenter on a post about building a criminal defense practice, not as the subject of discipline or disbarment.[1]
- A Facebook group snippet where the word “disbarment” appears in connection with someone named Tony, not Nancy, and there is no clear context tying it to her.[2]
- New York appellate decisions and attorney-discipline materials that reference “disbarment” or “suspension” generally but do not list a Nancy Eraca as a disciplined attorney.[3][4]

Given this, I cannot state that she has been disbarred, and any such claim would be unsubstantiated. If you need to verify an attorney’s status, the most reliable method is to check the official attorney-registration or bar-association lookup for the state where she is (or was) licensed.

NY attorney suspended three years for misconduct - The Daily Record

The snippet you pasted is combining two different things and none of it shows Nancy Eraca being disbarred.

- Multiple directories and her LinkedIn list her experience as Adjunct Professor at Corning Community College and as Chief Public Defender in Chemung County (or Public Defender) in the 2000–2010 and 2006–2009 ranges you quoted, consistent with your “Work Experience” line.[10][11][12]
- Her Avvo and directory profiles still list her as owner of the Law Office of Nancy M. Eraca and as a practicing lawyer in Elmira/Chemung County; they do not state that she has been disbarred or suspended.[13][14][11]
- The “NY attorney suspended three years for misconduct” article you quoted is about attorney Mark Steven Barnes from Oneida County, not about Eraca.[15]
- A related Daily Record piece titled “Attorney disbarred, two others disciplined” discusses other named lawyers and discipline orders but does not mention her.[16]

So: the work-experience bullet points you’re seeing do match publicly available profiles for Nancy Eraca, but the recent Daily Record discipline article you pasted refers to a different attorney and does not show that she was disbarred or suspended.[12][15][10]

Those two snippets are about two different lawyers and there is nothing in them showing that Nancy Eraca was disbarred or suspended.

- The “Work Experience * 1998 – Present. Adjunct Professor, Corning Community College. * 2006 – 2009. Chief, Chemung County Public Defender. * 1995 – 2004. Public Defe…” text is pulled from an online profile for Elmira attorney Nancy M. Eraca describing her background and roles (adjunct professor, chief public defender, public defender), not any discipline.[20][21][22]
- The “NY attorney suspended three years for misconduct – The Daily Record – Jan 21, 2026” item is a separate news article about an unnamed/other New York attorney (e.g., from Oneida County) who was suspended three years for failing to respond to misconduct charges; it is not about Eraca and does not list her as the subject.[23][24]
- Her own law-office site and current directory listings still present her as a licensed defense and family-law attorney in Elmira with over 30 years of practice, admission in 1990, service as an assistant district attorney and DWI prosecutor, and as Chemung County chief public defender through 2009, with no notation of disbarment or suspension.[21][25][20]

So: the experience bullets you’re seeing accurately reflect her career history, but the 2026 Daily Record discipline article you’re seeing is about a different lawyer, and there is no evidence in those materials that Nancy Eraca has been disbarred or suspended.
